Theresa Tomlinson, a Democratic politician and former mayor of Columbus, Georgia, has had a long and illustrious career in politics. From her early days as a city councilwoman to her unsuccessful bid for governor in 2018, Tomlinson has always been a force to be reckoned with. In this article, we'll take a look back at some of Tomlinson's most memorable moments from her political career.

Early Years

Theresa Tomlinson was born in Columbus, Georgia, in 1963. She attended the University of Georgia, where she earned a degree in political science. After graduating from college, Tomlinson worked as a legislative aide to a state representative. In 1994, she was elected to the Columbus City Council, where she served for eight years.

As a city councilwoman, Tomlinson was a strong advocate for affordable housing and economic development. She also worked to improve the city's infrastructure and public safety. In 2002, Tomlinson was elected mayor of Columbus. She was the first woman to hold the office.

Mayor of Columbus

As mayor, Tomlinson continued to focus on economic development and job creation. She also worked to improve the city's schools and parks. In 2006, Tomlinson was reelected to a second term. During her second term, she oversaw the construction of a new convention center and a new performing arts center. She also worked to attract new businesses to the city.

Tomlinson's time as mayor was not without its challenges. In 2009, the city was hit by a severe recession. Tomlinson worked to keep the city's budget balanced and to protect essential services. She also worked to create new jobs and to attract new businesses to the city.

2018 Gubernatorial Election

In 2018, Tomlinson announced her candidacy for governor of Georgia. She ran on a platform of progressive policies, including expanding Medicaid, increasing funding for education, and protecting the environment.

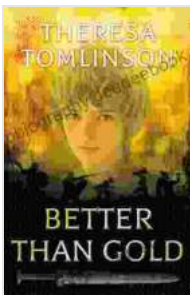

Tomlinson was one of seven candidates in the Democratic primary. She finished second in the primary, behind Stacey Abrams.

Tomlinson's gubernatorial campaign was a historic moment for Georgia. She was the first woman to win a major party's nomination for governor in the state's history. Her campaign also helped to energize the Democratic base in Georgia. Abrams ultimately lost the general election to Republican

Brian Kemp, but Tomlinson's campaign helped to lay the groundwork for future Democratic victories in the state.

Legacy

Theresa Tomlinson has had a long and successful career in politics. She has been a strong advocate for affordable housing, economic development, and education. She has also worked to protect the environment and to improve public safety. Tomlinson is a role model for women and girls who aspire to public office. She is a reminder that anything is possible if you have the courage to dream big.
